Claim File

A dealership hired seasonal help to wash and clean customers' vehicles during the summer. Since those employees only drove around the lot, the dealer did not check their Motor Vehicle Records (MVRs). On a busy day, the service manager sent a seasonal worker on a parts run. The 19-year-old worker had an accident. Had the dealer checked, he would have discovered the worker's three prior speeding tickets, disqualifying him from driving for the dealership.
